

Surojit Gupta, PhD

Dr. Surojit Gupta is an Associate Professor of Mechanical Engineering in the University of North Dakota. Dr. Gupta has published over 50 technical papers, 6 patents (granted and pending – US and International), and has given over 20 invited/keynote talks and over 70 contributed presentations in several international, national and local conferences. Previously, Dr. Gupta was employed in The Rutgers University. Prior to that, he was a postdoctoral fellow in The Pennsylvania State University.

Earlier, Dr. Gupta completed his doctoral studies from Drexel University and MBA from University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Dr. Gupta was awarded the Du Co Ceramics Award, Chatwal Memorial Award, TMS Young Professional Development Award, Dean Teaching Professorship, Dean's Award for the Best Faculty (2016), Global Young Investigator (ECD, ACerS, 2016), and ASM/IIM Lectureship (2016), etc. Dr. Gupta is a passionate educator and has supervised several graduate theses.

As a young professional, Dr. Gupta raised funding from National Science Foundation (NSF) for conducting Young Professional Network conference for ACerS. As a part of the award, he was able to give travel support to various young professionals from the University of Akron, Alfred University, Georgia Institute of Technology, among others. Dr. Gupta is an active member of Sigma Xi, ACerS, TMS, ACS, ASM International, STLE, and ASME.